We collect personal information on individuals only as allowed by law. We limit the collection of personal information to what is relevant and necessary to accomplish a lawful purpose. We collect your personal information from others, such as credit bureaus, affiliates, other companies and information provided by you, including information we collect when you visit our website, transaction information, and information we collect about you from third-party sources.

We do not collect home, business or email addresses, or account information from persons who simply browse our internet website. The information we do automatically collect includes the domain name or Internet Protocol address that relates to the machine or device used to access our website, the type of browser and operating system used, the date and time when the website is visited, device ID if you are on a mobile device, and web pages displayed.

Like many websites, our website uses “session cookies” and “persistent cookie” technology. Persistent cookies are small text files that our website places within your browser so that it can remember you when you show up again later – like cookie crumbs. None of these cookies store any of your personal information. We use persistent cookies to enhance your experience on our website while also protecting your privacy, as well as enhancing the functionality and performance of our website, and for analytical purposes. On our website, temporary cookies, also called session cookies, may be placed within your browser and expire as soon as you exit our website. Typically, session cookies are used to facilitate interactions between you and the fields in forms on our website.

Managing cookie preferences differs from browser to browser. Please refer to your web browser for further information. If you would like to disable cookies from www.revolvefinance.com, please use the help function in your web browser to restrict cookies from our website.

We use Google Analytics to see how visitors are using revolvefinance.com. Google Analytics reports traffic patterns anonymously. We may collect non-identifying information, such as the type of browser and browser version you are using to access our website, the day and time you access our website, the referring website that linked you directly to our website (if you arrived at our website by clicking a link on another website), and limited geographic information. No personally identifiable information is collected for this purpose.

We partner with companies that deliver ads for financial products and services on sites that you visit on the web. In order to provide you with a more appropriate online experience, some of our ads that you may see are based on your previous online activity on our website and other websites. Information about your online activities, combined with other information, may be used to select an ad for a product or service that better matches your interests – which is called online behavioral advertising (“OBA”) or interest-based advertising.

You can opt out from receiving ads based on your online behavior by visiting the Digital Advertising Alliance (DAA) opt-out page at <http://www.aboutads.info/choices/>. If you elect to opt out of OBA, you will still see ads but they may not be as pertinent to you. Please keep in mind that opting out is cookie-based and will only affect the specific computer and browser on which the opt-out cookie is applied. If you delete your browser cookies, or if you use a different computer or a different browser and want to continue to be opted out of OBA, you will need to opt out again.
